13. Defendant also maintains a sufficient number of employees to satisfy the jurisdictional prerequisites of the Pennsylvania Human Relations Act (requiring four or more employees).

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

17. The foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein in their entirety as if set forth in full.

18. Plaintiff was employed with Defendant from approximately November 17, 1987 until May 12, 2014 when he was pretextually and unlawfully terminated.

19. Plaintiff is an African-American.

20. Plaintiff's date of birth is October 11, 1962.

21. Plaintiff was unlawfully terminated after 26 years of service.

22. Plaintiff was told he was being terminated for unsatisfactory performance.

23. This occurred, despite the fact that Plaintiff had 14 years of positive year end appraisals.

24. Plaintiff was deliberately and willfully singled out due to his race and his age.

25. Plaintiff was not given opportunities to be cross trained.

26. Plaintiff and another African-American Associate were the only two out of approximately 24 Associates, similarly situated who were not given these opportunities.

27. In or around July or August of 2013, Plaintiff requested a meeting with his Supervisor (Angela Rodden) to discuss time off that he needed.

28. Plaintiff was surprised she used this time, instead of a regularly scheduled monthly one on one meeting, to discuss how Defendant is changing and finished with something to the effect of "and Vanguard may not be the place for your type."

29. Upon information and belief, this was a reference to Plaintiff's race and/or age.

30. At Defendant, there is a culture wherein employees succeed or fail based on their productivity and quality average.

31. Upon information and belief, Defendant uses a system called Horizon to calculate these numbers and Defendant claims the system never makes mistakes.

32. In or around September of 2013, Plaintiff noticed a blatant mistake on his monthly numbers.

33. Plaintiff documented the mistake on his monthly one on one questionnaire.

34. Plaintiff's act of "documenting" the mistake seemed to anger his Supervisor Angela Rodden as she updated his personal appraisal and blamed Plaintiff for mistakes he had never made.

35. In fact, Plaintiff was the one who corrected the mistake.

36. Rodden failed to and refused to acknowledge and correct the significant Horizon mistake.

37. Upon information and belief, the Horizon calculating system had been used to fire individuals and force three older Associates to retire early and Plaintiff was subjected to a significant manipulation of the system.

38. On or about October 4, 2013, Plaintiff was sent an email from Rodden questioning him on an item he was working on and falsely accusing him about how this was apparently the third time she had to remind him of a certain procedure.

39. Plaintiff respectfully responded by e-mail letting Rodden know she was wrong.

40. After Plaintiff brought to her attention both mistakes, she wrote Plaintiff up on a performance alert for competencies.

41. Upon information and belief, Defendant's procedure is supposed to be an oral warning prior to a written warning.

42. Plaintiff was never given the oral warning.

43. Even more confusing were Plaintiff's impressive rates, documented from January 1, 2013 through October 31, 2013, which never supported the characterization that he was an incompetent processor.

44. Plaintiff was surprised when he walked into a conference room and the manager was there with his supervisor.

45. Upon information and belief, Defendant always uses productivity to target someone but Plaintiff was clearly more than competent, so they had great difficulty.

46. In or around 2013, Defendant stated they would be relying heavily on competencies and possibly do away with productivity numbers.

47. Upon information and belief, Defendant did so because competencies are subjective, but productivity is not.

48. Plaintiff was supposed to meet once a week to discuss his work.

49. However, in October, November and December of 2013 there were no meetings scheduled because Plaintiff's work was solid.

50. Rodden instead decided to extend the performance alert based on a few questionable items.

51. A new Supervisor, Tony Perilli, came in November of 2013 and met with a number of employees individually.

52. Perilli said to Plaintiff that it was easy to see that he was heavily burdened and noticed Plaintiff did not communicate.

53. Perilli told Plaintiff that going through all this difficulty would not be worth it to his health.

54. Upon information and belief, his exact words were "If I were you, I would go to HR."

55. Mysteriously, at the same time, Plaintiff noticed a drop in his productivity numbers.

56. By the time January of 2014 had come about, there was a very strange and drastic drop in Plaintiff's productivity.

57. Plaintiff's productivity rate had declined from January of 2013 through October of 2013 (which was over 99%) to an immediate drop of 60%.

58. Plaintiff's January 2014 Horizon reports posted a never before record low percentage of 40% and even a 17%.

59. Perilli pressed Plaintiff for answers as to what was going on.

60. Plaintiff told Perilli that he was processing exactly as he always had and told him something was wrong with the system.

61. He assured Plaintiff nothing was wrong.

62. At this time, Plaintiff began to believe he was deliberately manipulating his numbers.

63. Plaintiff continually expressed there was no way the numbers were correct.

64. At this time, Perilli said he spoke with Plaintiff's former supervisor (Angela Rodden) who agreed with Plaintiff and told him that Plaintiff's productivity was never that low.

65. Plaintiff was told by Perilli that he would have to contact the HR Representative along with the Manager to let them know about his "productivity failure", since that was a major part of his competencies.

66. In Perilli's words; "I don't know Thom, they may want to move forward with termination."

67. When Plaintiff questioned the accuracy of the numbers, he told Plaintiff they were accurate but he knew Perilli was wrong.

68. Plaintiff was under enormous pressure and emotional stress as a result.

69. It did not matter how hard Plaintiff worked, his productivity numbers were still extremely and inaccurately low.

70. In or around March of 2014, Plaintiff finally found proof his productivity was being manipulated to give the appearance he was failing miserably.

71. For approximately four months Defendant was doubling Plaintiff's normal work day of 7.50 hours to read 15.00 hours.

72. Defendant had Plaintiff working 7.50 hours a day then doing nothing for 7.50 hours a day.

73. Horizon had calculated Plaintiff's work week production at 75 hours instead of 37.50.

74. Upon information and belief, Perilli or someone else was deliberately entering bogus information.

75. When Plaintiff shared his findings with his supervisor, he stopped sending Plaintiff his Horizon rates altogether through email and no longer provided Plaintiff with anything pertaining to this situation.

76. Plaintiff was being retaliated against and ignored.

77. In or around April of 2014, Plaintiff decided to raise the issue with Perilli.

78. Plaintiff sent three polite emails detailing how he had solved the productivity problem and requested meetings with him to discuss.

79. He never responded.

80. Shortly after he realized Plaintiff knew what was going on he called a conference room meeting and told Plaintiff that his Horizon situation was taken off the table and apparently would not count against him with the competency write up.

81. However, Plaintiff had been set up, lied to for months and was significantly stressed and emotionally exhausted.

82. In or around May of 2014, Plaintiff was fired shortly after disclosing his findings.

83. Upon information and belief, Defendant has fired six African Americans and forced five African Americans, within Plaintiff's department alone, into early retirement after over 30 years of service.
